The story

How many layers does a human being have?

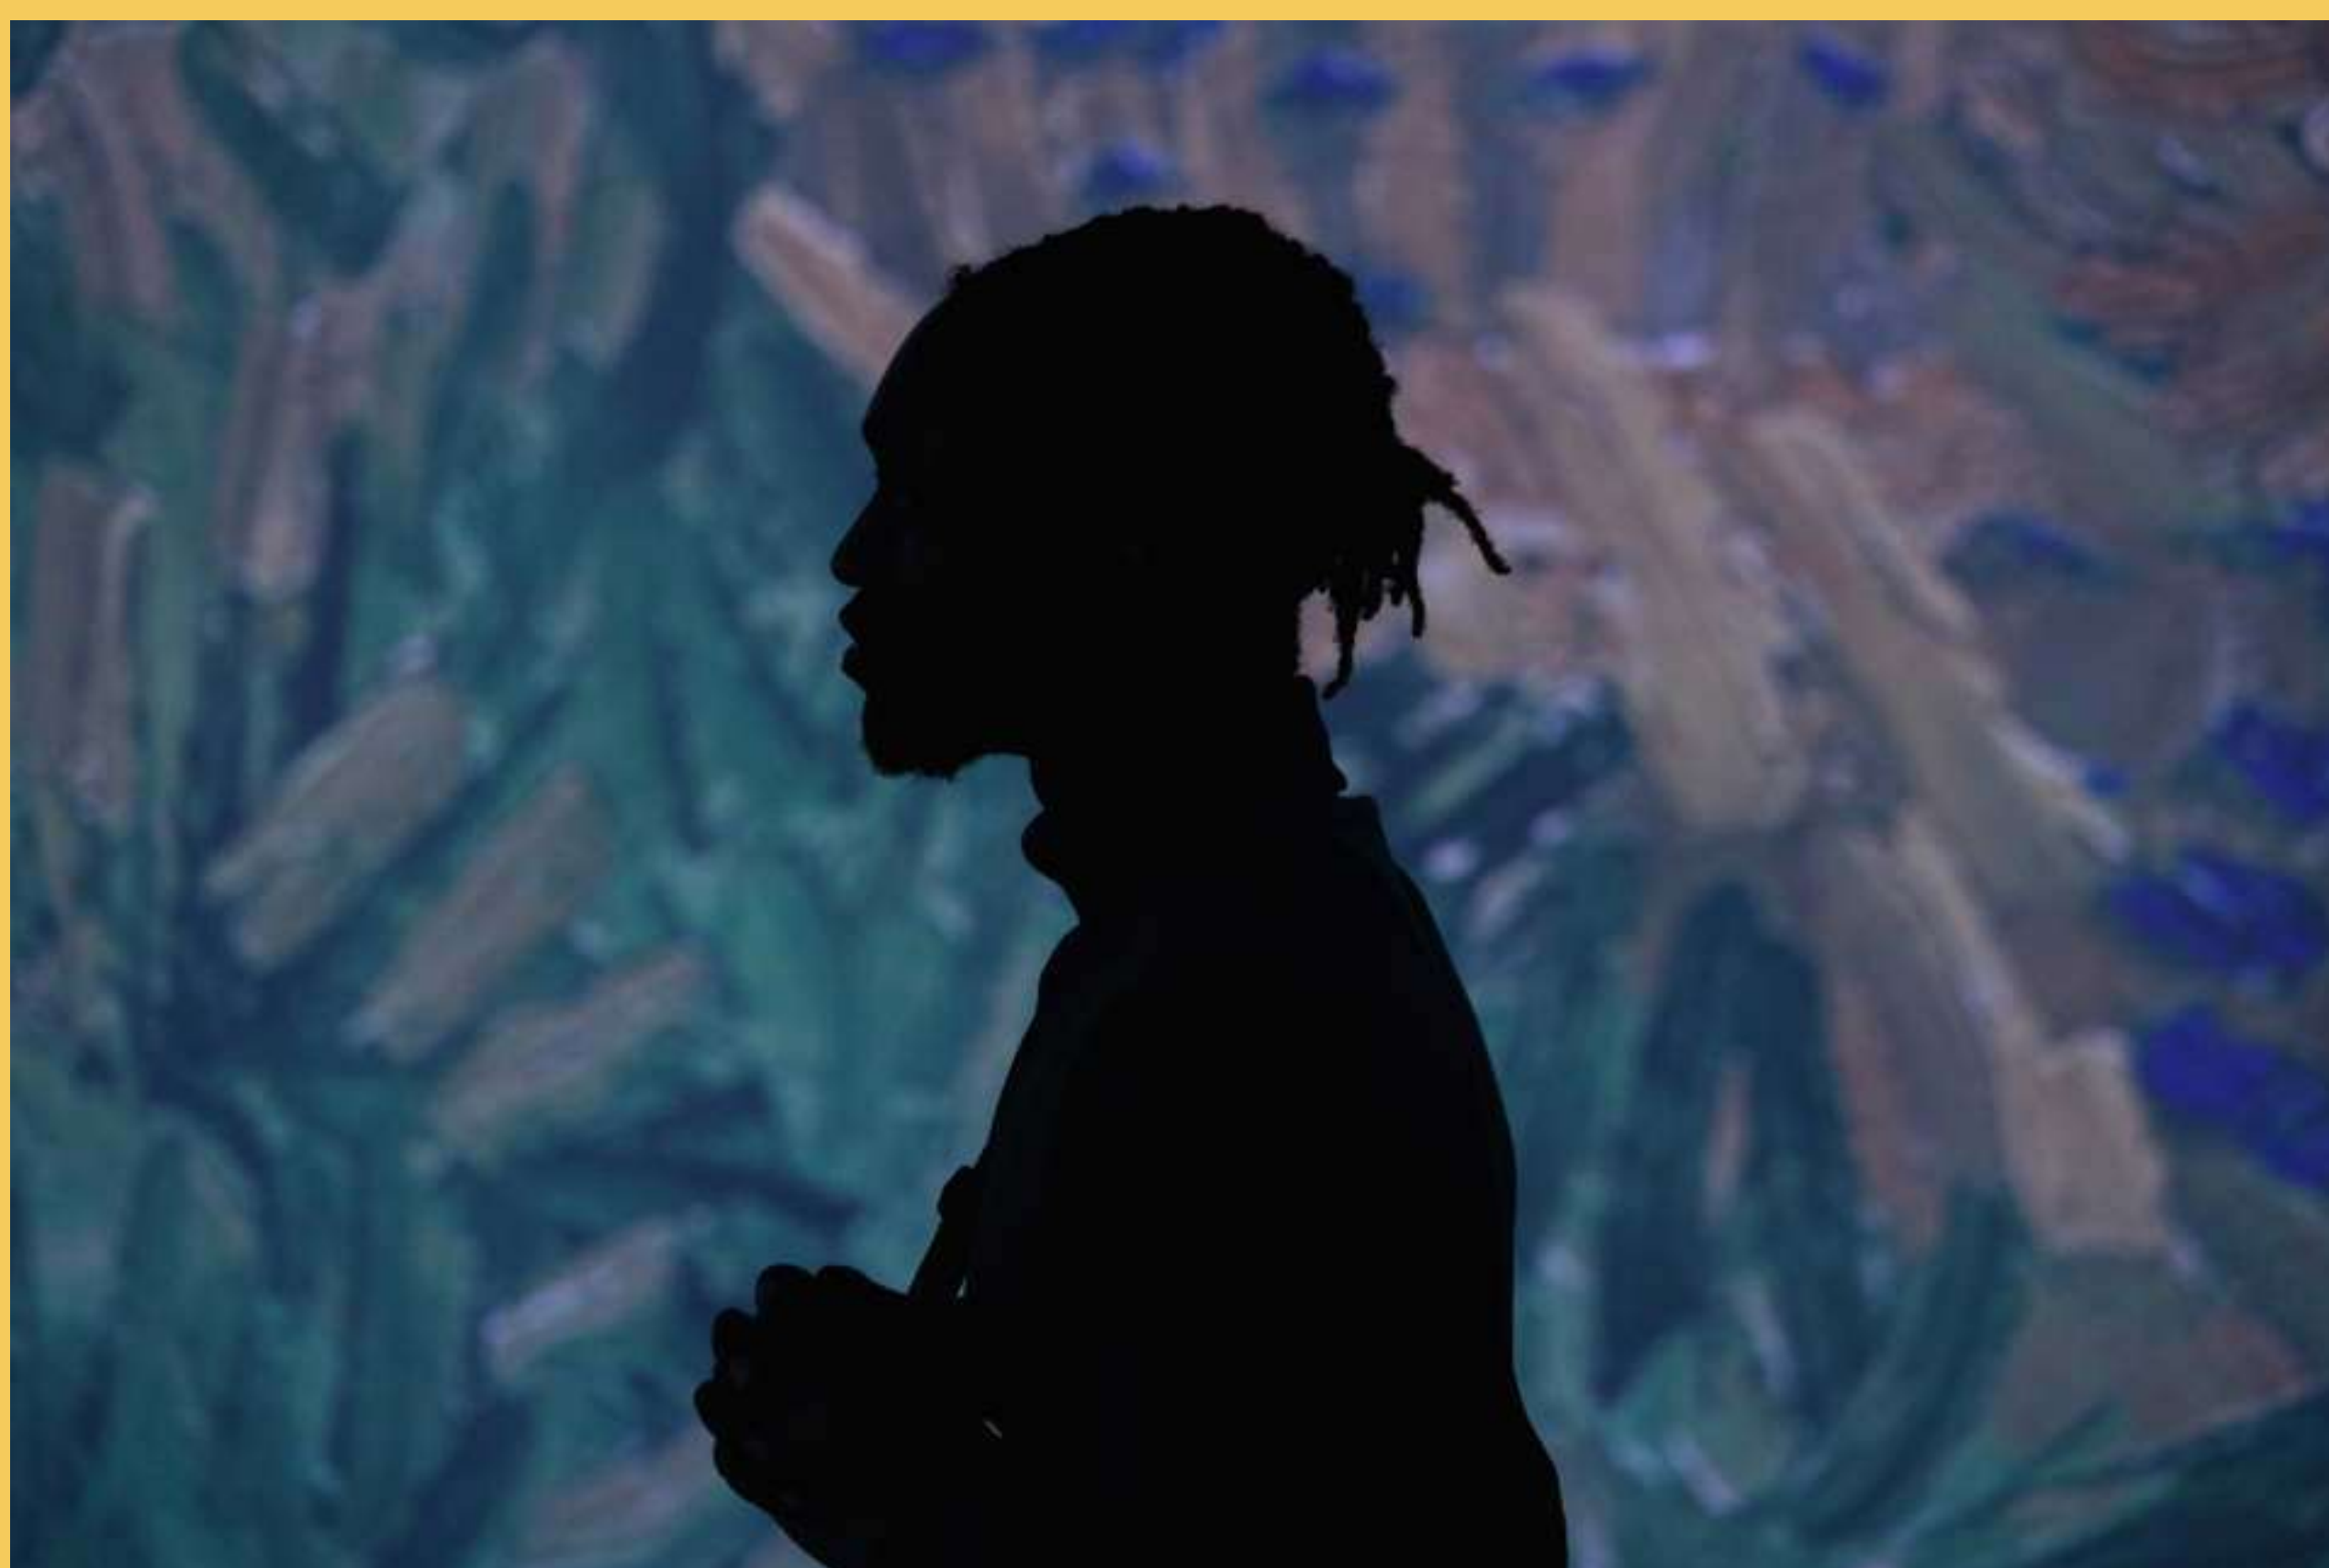

As much as we think we know a person, Don't we just know the silhouettes of them?

Deeper are their feelings, bruises, experiences, traumas, perspectives, upbringing, memories, defining moments. Each choice they make is a consequence of those layers.

There should be no place for judgment between human beings since our layers were carved by different lives each one lived.

Of one another we might be only seeing silhouettes. So let us be kind and embrace the differences.

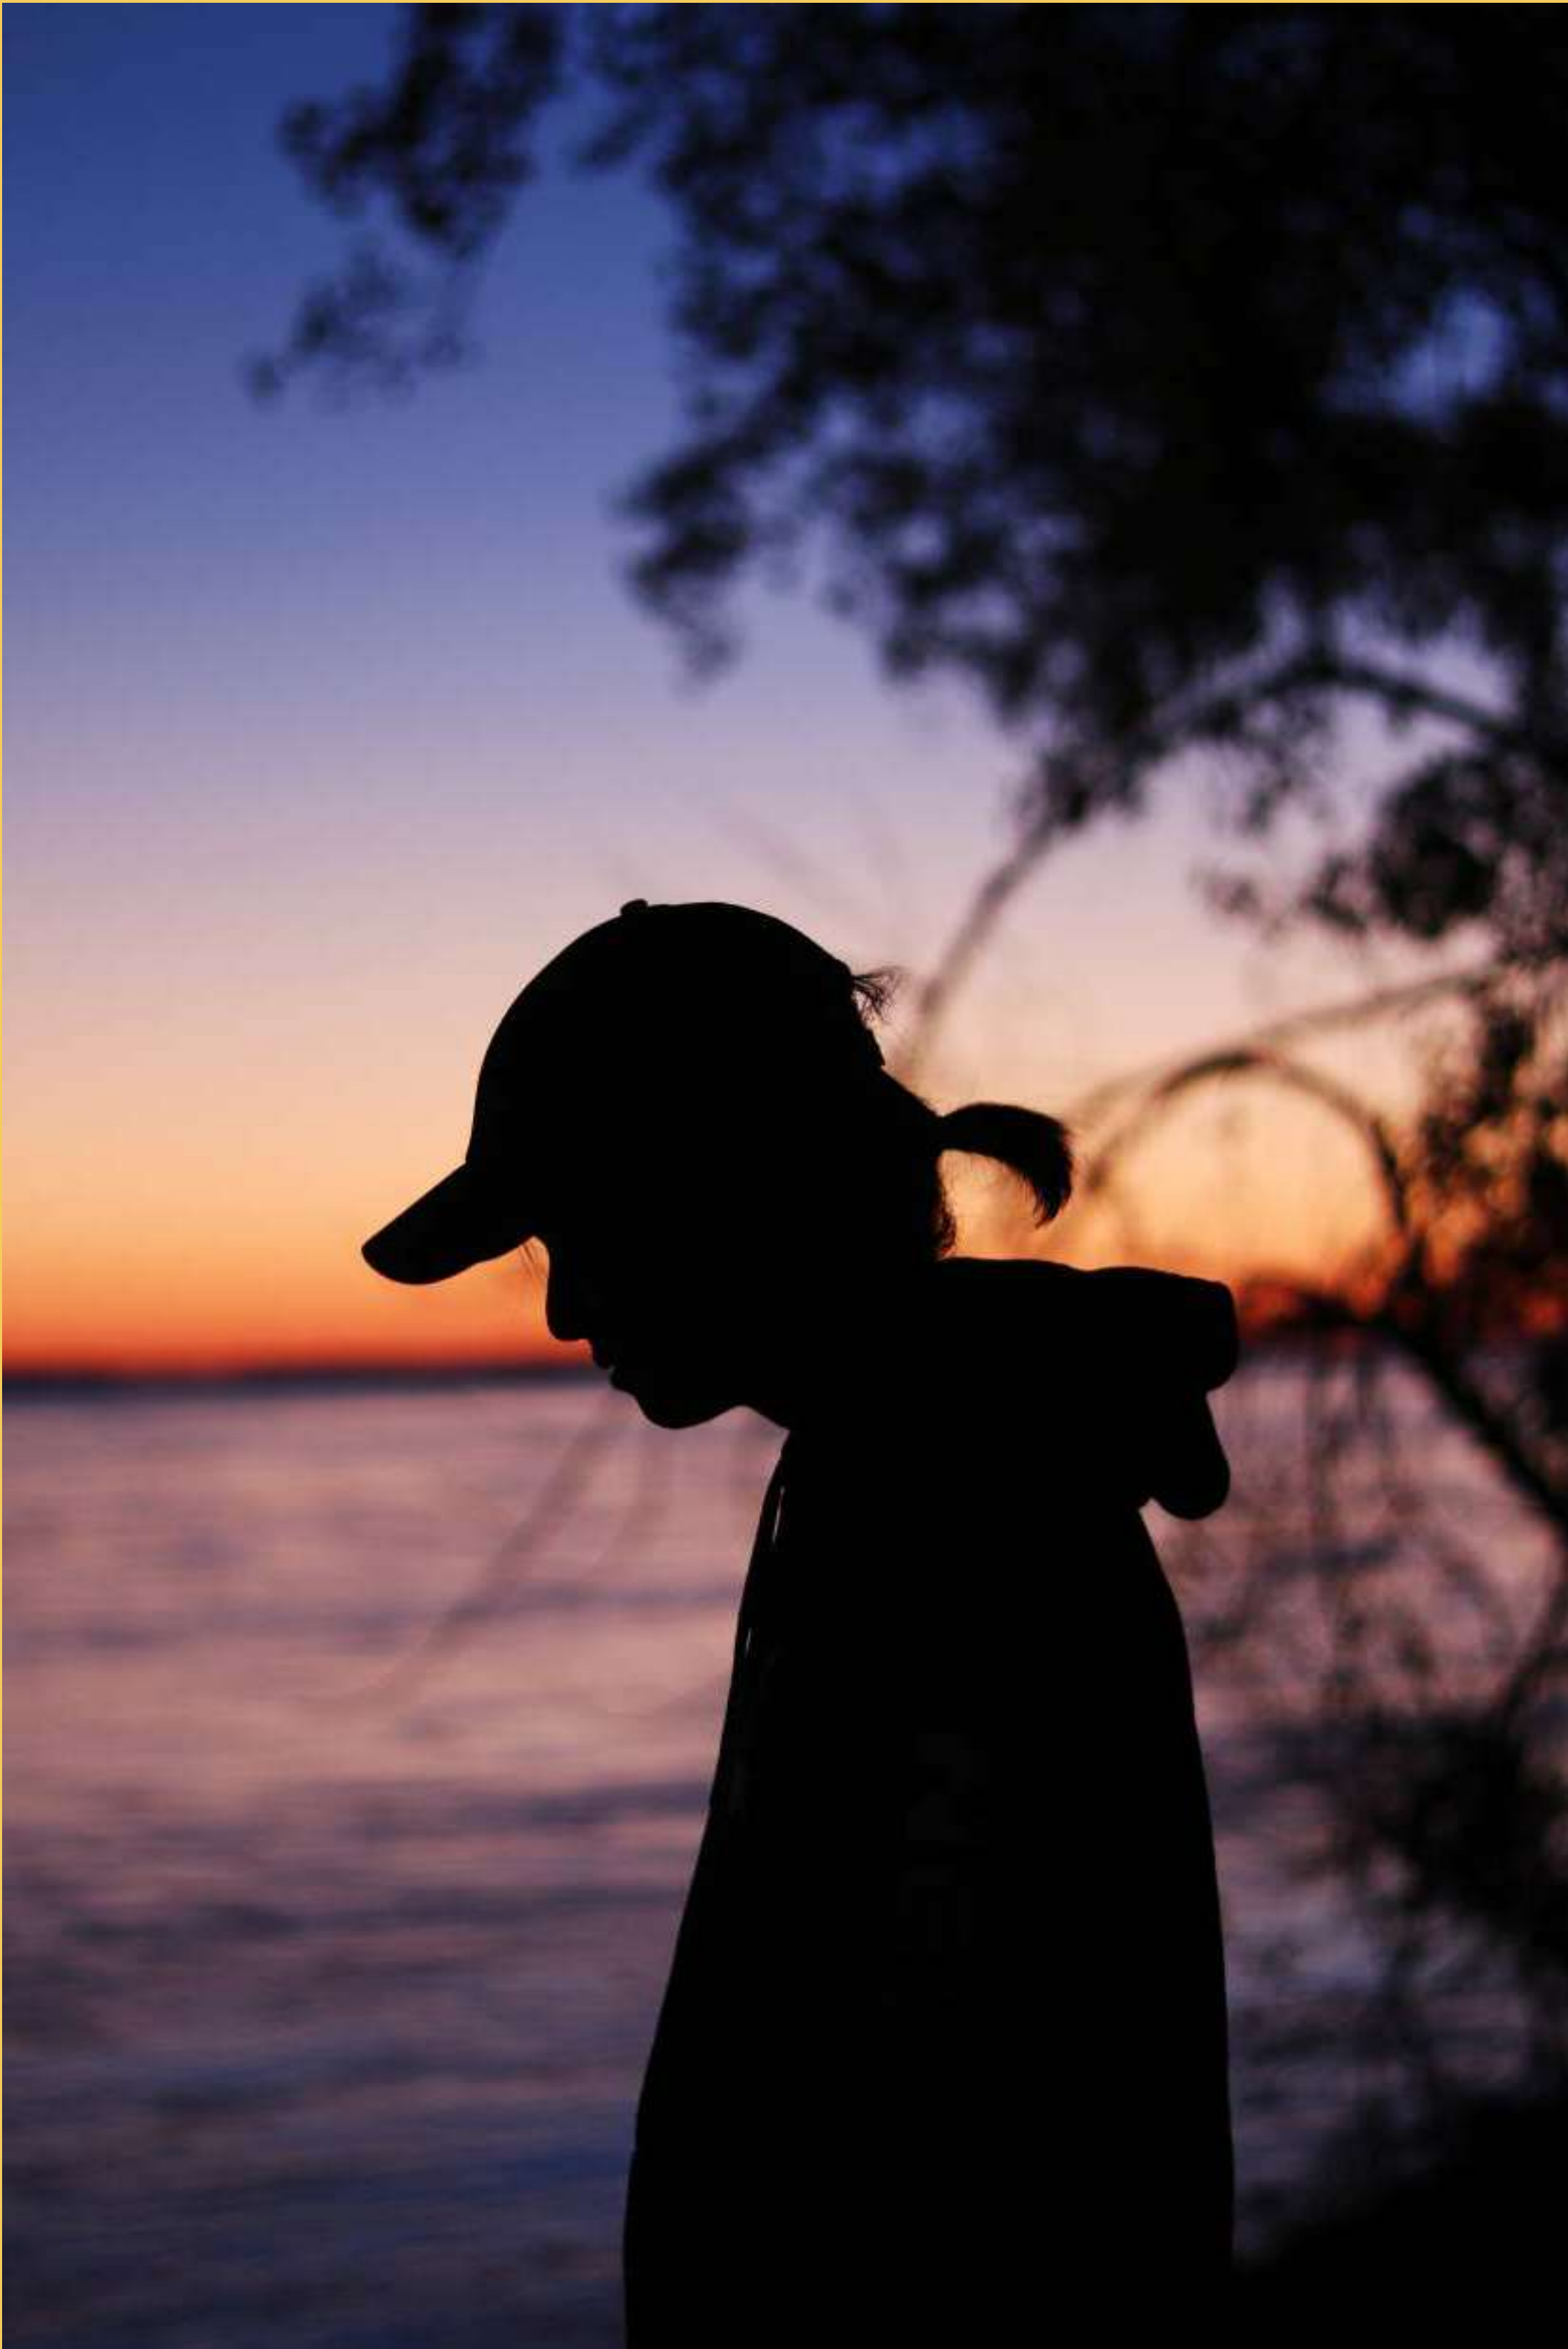

Wandering, wondering

Reflecting

Growing with buildings

Questioning

Loving again
