Credits for optional subjects – Tracks

No tracks are defined in the degree, as one of the main objectives of the syllabus is to enable the highest level of flexibility by means of a significant number of credits in optional subjects. This will enable students to increase and broaden their knowledge in the areas in which they want to specialize.

Unless basic and obligatory credits are recognized, credits obtained for academic mobility are counted as optional. The minimum number of ECTS credits (whether basic training, compulsory or optional) than can be obtained for academic mobility is 20.

External internships are not compulsory. They must be carried out abroad, and account for up to 14 credits, which are counted as optional credits.

Timetables

In general, students will receive two hours of theory and one seminar hour per subject every week. The rest of the educational process takes place through the student's personal work (each ECTS credit is equivalent to 25 hours of training). Each term consists of ten teaching weeks. The course is full time.
