Posición

Personal Soporte a la Investigación

Descripción

We have an opening for a research assistant position for at least one year, starting as of September/October 2019. (The timing is relatively flexible). The position is aimed at supporting project needs for three ongoing field experiments in Sierra Leone and Indonesia, run by Erika Deserranno (Northwestern University), and Gianmarco Leon Ciliotta (UPF). The work will not involve fieldwork but rather data analysis, and the new research assistant will mostly be based in Barcelona and there is the possibility of also spending some time in Chicago.

The projects are:

1. Financial Incentives in Multi-Layered Organizations: Evidence from the Health Worker Program in Sierra Leone
See description at www.socialscienceregistry.org/trials/3345
2. Vertical Pay Differentials and Worker Productivity: Evidence from the Health Worker Program in Sierra Leone
See description at www.socialscienceregistry.org/trials/3993

The ideal candidate is a PhD student or a Master student interested in research and who has a good grasp of working with data and STATA in particular, and who is interested in pursuing an academic career in the future. Further specifics are provided below.

Potential Tasks:

- Data cleaning and data analysis;
- Support the project with administrative tasks;
- Carrying out literature review related to the project(s)

Working hours:

- Full-time
