

Course title: International Business and Globalization

Language of instruction: English

Professor: Francisco J. Granados

Professor's contact and office hours: fgranados@ibei.org; by appointment.

Recommended credit: 3 US credits - 6 ECTS credits

Course prerequisites: There are no prerequisites for this course

Course focus and approach: The course focuses on main socioeconomic and political aspects of globalization associated to firms that operate internationally, as well as on key international management topics. The course emphasizes historical, political, sociological, and managerial perspectives.

Course description: How does international business drive economic globalization and affect people across countries? How do international business and current domestic and international political issues affect each other? What challenges and opportunities do firms face operating internationally? How corporate social responsibility can contribute to sustainable development? The course starts with an overview of economic globalization from a historical, political and sociological perspective, focusing on its most relevant aspects associated to international business: the role of states and international institutions (e.g., World Bank, IMF, EU) in the international economy; global economic crisis, socioeconomic development; inequalities within and across countries; international migration; domestic political debates referred to globalization. The second part of the course considers key topics of international business emphasizing their corporate social responsibility component: management across different national political environments, internationalization and alliance strategies, global marketing, and global R&D and human resources management. These topics are mainly studied considering how the strategies of multinational firms may affect national and global sustainable development.

International Relations Program
Winter 20

Learning objectives: At the end of the course, students should have learned (a) key concepts and debates around globalization and international business management, (b) the role of international business as a globalization driver that affects people and politics across countries, and (c) the challenges and opportunities that firms face operating internationally.

Teaching methodology: The class sessions are structured around an introductory lecture by the professor, class discussions on the arguments explained in class and the readings, and student presentations of instructional case studies. Course handouts will be provided to help in following the lectures. Current news related to course topics will be considered to illustrate these.

Course workload: Students should read in advance the readings presented and discussed in the class sessions. Students will do a group presentation of one of the instructional case-studies on international management considered in the course. A mid-term exam and a final exam will assess, respectively, the topics of the first and second parts of the course. The final exam consists of a take-home essay part and an in-class questioner part.

Assessment criteria:

Active class participation: 15%

Group presentation: 10%

Mid-term exam: 30%

Final exam: 45%

Absence policy: After the add/drop, all registrations are considered final and HESP Absence Policy begins to apply. For this academic year, such policy is as follows:

Attending class is mandatory and will be monitored daily by professors. Missing classes will impact on the student' s final grade as follows:

Absences	Penalization
Up to two (2) absences	No penalization

International Relations Program
Winter 20

Three (3) absences	1 point subtracted from final grade (on a 10 point scale)
Four (4) absences	2 points subtracted from final grade (on a 10 point scale)
Five (5) absences or more	The student receives an INCOMPLETE ("NO PRESENTAT") for the course

The PEHE/HESP attendance policy does not distinguish between justified or unjustified absences. The student is deemed responsible to manage his/her absences. Emergency situations (hospitalization, family emergency...) will be analyzed on a case by case basis by the Academic Director of the HESP.

Classroom norms: No food, drink, or checking devices is allowed during the class sessions.
