Main research lines

- Journalism ethics and excellence
- Journalism history
- Newsroom integration and journalism education
- Cyberjournalism
• The journalism history research line analyses the evolution of media throughout history, placing special emphasis on the study of those changes experienced by the press during the Spanish transition to democracy (1975-1978). This area also focuses on examining historical newspaper archives and journalism authors.
• This research line is coordinated by Dr. Jaume Guillamet.
The role of the Press during the Spanish Transition to Democracy: three competitive projects

   • Analysis of the Spanish transition to democracy from the standpoint of those journalistic pieces published in some of the major British, US, French and Italian daily newspapers.

- We are working on a large research project of the Institute for Catalan Studies (IEC) that aims to create a historical catalogue of all periodicals published in Catalan.
- Historic Catalogue of the Press in Catalan I. The blooming of publications (1641-1898)
Other projects:

- Journalism authors main projects and journalists websites.
• The journalism ethics and excellence research line, considered one of the most consolidated within the GRP, examines traditional and innovative media accountability instruments, ethical principles and journalistic deontology.

• This research line is currently coordinated by Dr. Ruth Rodríguez and Dr. Marcel Mauri.

• This project was conducted jointly with teams from the Carlos III University of Madrid, the Basque Country University and the University of Seville.

• Phases:
  • Content analysis of all the codes and documents regarding ethical norms and regulations in Spain and creation of a journalism ethics thesaurus.
  • Online survey completed by 1,198 Catalan journalists + 30 in-depth interviews with media professionals.
  • Focus groups and telephone surveys with citizens.
• MediaAcT - Media Accountability and Transparency in Europe (ref. 7FP7-SSH-2009-5.1.1). Funded by The European Commission, 2010-2013.
  - Comparative research project about Media Accountability Systems (MAS) in European Union members.
  - In coordination with 14 universities and research centres in Europe.

MediaAct

Summary

The project "Media Accountability and Transparency in Europe" is a comparative research effort on media accountability systems (MAS) in EU member states as indicators for media pluralism in Europe. The project analyzes the development and impact of established media accountability systems (e.g. press councils, codes of ethics) as well as new media accountability systems emerging in the Internet (e.g. media criticism in blogs). The main goals of this research project are:

1. to investigate the quantity and quality of media accountability systems as prerequisites for pluralistic debates about media independence in times of growing media concentration,

2. to compare the impact of established and innovative media accountability systems online on different media systems and journalism cultures in Europe and beyond,

• MediaACES. Accountability and Media Systems in Spain: Real impact and good practices in Spanish Media (MINECO/FEDER, UE, CSO2015-66404-P. 2016-2019)
  • 15 researchers from 7 different universities
  • The project seeks to identify the journalistic cultures existing in different Spanish territories and examine the impact of media accountability instruments in each one of these cultures.
  • The research will make use of different research techniques: surveys with journalists of six territories (Madrid, Catalonia, Basque Country, Galicia, Andalucía and Valencia) and focus groups with citizens.
MediaACES

El proyecto I+D+i ‘Accountability y Culturas Periodísticas en España. Impacto y propuesta de buenas prácticas en los medios de comunicación españoles’ (MediaACES), financiado por el Ministerio de Economía y Competitividad (CSO2015-66404-P) continua una línea de investigación que tiene como objetivo fundamental detectar las culturas periodísticas existentes en distintos territorios de España así como examinar el impacto de los instrumentos de rendición de cuentas o media accountability systems en cada una de estas culturas. El trabajo parte de la hipótesis que la cultura periodística en España no responde a un único modelo de sistema de...
Other projects and research agreements:
• Catalan Corporation of Audiovisual Media (CCMA). GRP drafted several documents which helped to elaborate the stylebook of the organization.
• Catalan Information Advisory Board (CIC).
  • GRP examined the cases heard and decided by the Council in its first 15 years of activity.
• The treatment of the young people in the media (2009-2010), funded by the Catalan government.
  • Analysed the image of the youth in Catalan media (newspapers, free newspapers, online newspapers, radio and television) and designed tools to help to improve that coverage, including a Decalogue of recommendations addressed to journalists.
This research line analyses from technological and professional perspectives to what extent messages change as a result of media convergence. It also seeks to explain how journalistic discourse is built within this newly created context.

This line also focuses on the legal aspects of the topic, such as intellectual property and copyright of journalistic contents produced by users, comparing various legal traditions (Common Law and Civil Law).

The researcher in charge of this area is Dr. Javier Díaz Noci.
• "Active Audiences and Journalism. Interactivity, Web Integration and Findability of Journalistic Information", financed by the Ministry of Economy and Competitiveness (Ref. CSO2012-39518-C04-02)
  • Focused on the analysis of the audience and the so-called 'user generated contents' in journalistic processes. The project sought to determine the regulation mechanisms that define users’ participation, analyse the types of content elaborated by audiences and define indicators to evaluate their quality.
  • Coordinated project with other Spanish universities.
  • UPF subgroup's specific research topic was "Interactivity, Web Integration and Searchability of News Reporting".

Mario Pérez-Montoro and Luís Codina have published a new book with Elsevier.

The main objective of this book is to introduce the concept of content-intensive websites (or information-intensive websites), since it is precisely this type of website, and its content-heavy webpages, to which the various concepts, ideas and techniques that we present in this book are best applied.

Following on from this presentation, we discuss the relationship between content-intensive websites and the contributions made by Library and Information Science to the universe of the World Wide Web. We conclude by providing a brief presentation of the overall content of this book, describing the subjects addressed in each of the remaining six chapters.

Newsroom integration and journalism education

- This line analyses newsrooms integration within the field of teaching of journalism, with the aim of finding new methodologies to train future journalists with the appropriate skills to develop a professional career in today’s media.
- Coordinator: Dr. Carles Singla.
- This line is closely connected to the course Integrated Journalism Workshop offered at the Bachelor's Degree in Journalism, and also linked to European project "Integrated Journalism in Europe - IJIE" (Ref. 528057-LLP-1-2012-1-BE-ERASMUS-FEXI).
- The project was a joint interdisciplinary effort of a consortium of five partners lead by UPF, that included Université Paris 8, Danish School of Media and Journalism, Babes-Bolyai University and Linnaeus University).
