Course Description
In Europe, the enactment of the European Convention on Human Rights in 1950 (ECHR) and the process of economic and political integration in the European Union (EU) over the second half of the twentieth century have contributed to create multiple spheres of rights' protection on the basis of state constitutions, the ECHR, and the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights. The ultimate interpreters of these declarations of rights are, respectively, Constitutional or Supreme Courts, the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR), and the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU). The dialogue among these courts has given rise to the so-called European ius commune in the field of fundamental rights. The plurality of rights and courts offers new opportunities for the protection of fundamental rights, but it also poses many challenges from a structural and political perspective. This course will analyze the dynamic interaction between the constitutional, supranational, and international legal orders for rights' protection in Europe.

Prerequisites
None

Methodology
The sessions will consist of an introduction of the topic and main issues by the professor, followed by a class discussion on the basis of the readings assigned. The readings will include doctrinal articles as well as judgments by the ECHR and the CJEU. Students shall read the materials in advance. The doctrinal articles will be posted in the Aula Global. The students shall look for the judgments in the respective websites of the ECtHR and the CJEU. Active participation in class is required. At the end of the course, students should have acquired a thorough understanding of the European systems of rights' protection and their mutual interaction. They are expected to develop skills for analytical reasoning and critical thinking regarding the problems of interpretation and judicial protection of fundamental rights in a plural context. Attendance is required to at least 80% of the sessions. Every student is expected to spend at least 4 hours per week in the preparation of the classes. They will need to devote at least 20 hours to the final essay.

Assignments and Evaluation

Throughout the course, students will be asked to submit two written assignments on a topic indicated by the professor. Active participation in class discussions will also be evaluated. Class assignments and participation will correspond to 20% of the grade.

The final essay will consist of reading two judgments by the ECtHR and the CJEU and answering the questions assigned. The students will need to show that they acquired the expected knowledge and skills. The final essay will correspond to 80% of the course grade.

In case of having failed the course, students will have the opportunity to be re-evaluated by submitting a different essay and two reading notes.
