

Luis Nuno Rodrigues is a Full Professor of History at ISCTE - University Institute of Lisbon, where he coordinates the Master's and PhD programs in International Studies. With a Ph.D. in American History from the University of Wisconsin, USA, he is the author and editor of around twenty books on topics related to the History of Portugal, Portuguese Foreign Policy, and particularly, the relations between Portugal and the United States of America. He served as the director of the Center for International Studies at ISCTE from 2016 to 2022 and directed the Ph.D. program in History, Security, and Defense Studies (in partnership with the Military Academy) for over a decade. He has also been a Visiting Professor at Brown University on several occasions. Among his works is the book "Kennedy-Salazar: A Crisis of an Alliance. Luso-American Relations between 1961 and 1963" and the article "Establishing a 'Cultural Base'? The Creation of the Fulbright Program in Portugal," published in the International History Review.