Why this Summer School?
This Summer School will provide students of the areas of Audiovisual Communication, Journalism or the Liberal Arts with a deep insight on Barcelona’s Communication industry. The courses will focus on cinema and documentary and will achieve a twofold purpose, thus allowing students to analyze the movies and documentaries so that they can acquire a deep understanding of the features that have shaped recent Spanish cinema. The high quality of the most recent Spanish cinema generation will be studied from a social, artistic and technical perspective. But Spanish cinema may also be used to bring up a reflection of the Spanish history and society. For these reasons, the courses will use the movies to set the basis for a deeper understanding of the Spanish society. Special emphasis will be put on Barcelona as a city which has become a main character in the plot of so many Spanish and international movies.

All students participating in this Summer School will produce a documentary about the city of Barcelona as their final project, which will be carried out in the UPF professional studios at the Audiovisual Communication Campus.
