Oriol Amat is an economist that started an academic career in 1980. He is specialized in management and financial accounting. During his forty years of academic career he has tried to balance the six dimensions of a faculty member:

- Research: His main research lines are in the fields of accounting fraud detection and key factors of successful companies. This research has been published in academic journals like the Journal of Business Ethics or European Accounting Review.
- Transfer of knowledge: His research has been disseminated through professional articles and books that have been translated into different languages (English, French, Portuguese, Catalan...).
- Education: He has published articles and books about how to teach, and he has been director of the Center for Innovation and Learning of the Pompeu Fabra University.
- University management: He has held different positions at UPF: Head of Studies, Vicerector of Economy and Information Systems, Head of the Economics and Business Academic Department, Dean of the UPF Barcelona School of Management.

In the UPF Barcelona School of Management he introduced, for the first time in Spain, a promotion track for the Faculty based in transfer of knowledge as a complement to the traditional track based on research. In this School he has led a fast transformation process which has allowed to obtain important international accreditations.
